

Values @ home

Our value for June is co-operation. Learning to work together with others is so important for children if they are going to be successful as they grow up. We will be doing lots of activities in school which help children to learn to listen to others, lead, take turns and consider different opinions. The children will also be listening to stories that show the benefits of teamwork and discussing what happens when people don't work together.

Games Night!!!!

Children learn co-operation by seeing it modelled by others, so what better way to do this than by having a games night! Choose some games that involve everyone working towards a common goal. For example, carefully directing a blindfolded friend around the garden; a game of heads, bodies and legs; charades; doing a jigsaw, building a tower out of marshmallows and wooden skewers. The possibilities are endless...

Minion Teamwork

There are lots of video clips around showing good co-operation. Have a look at this funny one involving some minions... <https://youtu.be/8NkDBQEiv8Y>

Cooperating as a family!

Have a chat as a family about how well everyone co-operates at home. Does everyone work together to keep the house tidy? Does everybody listen to each other's ideas when deciding something? Why not make a cooperation chart to use at home for this month to see if you can improve your co-operation!

Each time someone in the family (adults too!) helps another out, or works as a team, add to the chart. At the end of the month, why not celebrate your great co-operating by doing something all together.

If you would like to print out a ready made chart - there is one in the Living Our Values section on the School Website.

June 2025 - Co-operation
